I'll Fly Away!

Have you ever heard of the old folk song I'll fly Away?

The version I remember was tune sung in perfect harmony by the Kosoy sisters in 1956, but there are other versions produced by the likes of Johnny Cash, Alison Krauss, and others over the years.

Based on a 1929 hymn by Albert E. Brumley, it speaks of a more metaphorical flight--but the message is the same: Time for me to be going, folks.

And why not?

Today, there are loads of bargain flights online you can scoop up whenever you want to "fly away."

The trick is knowing where to find them.

That's why we've put together this list of the best online resources for Cheap Flights. In this list, you'll find a variety of online flight resources including:

- Newsletters
- Flight Aggregators
- Booking Engines
- Vacation Clubs
- Price Tracking Apps
- Expert Forums

Each resource provided is a clickable link, putting the power of finding cheap flights right at your fingertips in one convenient location.

If you have a certain destination in mind, go ahead and set up flight alerts using the Hopper app, which will tell you when prices are expected to fall. It will even go as far as predicting the best time to buy.

Or, opt for a more personal approach by sending an email request directly to Matt at Matt's Cheap Flights. He'll do the searching for you and recommend the best prices.

That's just the beginning. Here are 27 great tools for you to explore so you don't ever overpay for airfare.

One (or more) of them might just be your new favorite travel planning tool.

A Few Words of Caution: I do not endorse all of the resources in this list, as I do not have personal experiences with each. It's best practice to comparison shop and book flights directly with the airlines whenever possible. Be cautious of 3rd party scams, fees, and booking policies. Always compare 3rd party itineraries with the airlines. They may offer additional discounts or incentives if you book with them.
