Welcome, Spring!

Spring in New England presents the opportunity to experience all four seasons in one day.

While the flowers begin to bloom across the region, turning it into a land of botanical bliss, the warm air and sunshine aren't necessarily here to stay.

Technically, springtime in the region begins with the vernal equinox around March 20th and ends June 20th, but there's no telling what Mother Nature might have in mind in between.

Temperatures can range from a chilly 30°F (-1°C) to a warm, 67°F (20°C), with a mix of wet and dry days. The further north you go, the cooler it will be. You may even still find snow on the ground--and in that case, see our Packing Checklist for Winter in New England! Likewise, locations toward the coastline will often be cooler, given the ocean breezes.

Be forewarned: The weather can change from rain to shine--then to sleet and even to snow--in the blink of an eye! You can certainly say that there is nothing quite like springtime in New England.

Spring is a great time to get back outside for a nature walk or hike and enjoy the fresh, clean air. If you're lucky, you'll catch some beautiful rainbows when a spring rain shower clears.

You'll find plenty of festivals throughout the region during the season, celebrating the arts, nature, daffodil days, and New England's rich history.

Whether you are planning on visiting coastal towns or quaint mountain villages, New England is bursting with activities and things to do during the spring season, even more so after weathering the cold winter. So, it's best to be prepared when you pack for a visit.

Anytime you're planning a trip to New England (but especially in spring) you should plan to dress in layers for your own personal climate control. And pack a variety of outerwear to suit the variations in weather.

That's why we've put together this checklist to help you plan what to pack.

Hi! I'm Jackie Gately from Enjoy Travel Life.

I'm a seasoned traveler writer and empty-nester embarking on new adventures. I love photography, travel blogging, gardening, and designing creative travel products over at Enjoy Travel Life.

Some of my favorite things include

- Going off the beaten path
- The beauty of my New England home in all seasons
- Enjoying local, wholesome flavors and regional drinks
- Chasing the sunset with my camera.

It's experiential learning at it's best, and I thrive on it.

I welcome you to follow my travels at enjoytravellife.com as well as on social media.
